

ABSTRACT

A method and system for providing an interactive computer-driven project management coordination service in which project providers can advertise available jobs, projects, or projects on the Internet and service providers can display information about time schedules and availability. The method and system enables project and service providers to access via the Internet the data stored, to search said data for purposes of matching and coordinating projects with the requisite services, and to delete or alter said data as projects or time schedules change from day to day.